The Opera Season. The Theater was well filled last night on the occasion of the reproduction of Weber's opera, Der Freischutz, by the Mozart society of Memphis. Misses Houston and Steele gave most pleasing interpretations of their respective parts, were deservedly applauded, presented with magnificent bouquets and called before the curtain several times to respond to the long-continued applause from the audience. The young ladies acquitted themselves admirably, displaying no little lyric talent for amateurs. The other roles were equally as well filled as on the previous night. The opera went off in a smooth manuer, everything working better than on Thursday everything working better than on Thursday night. The incantation scene in the Wolf's Glen was very finely presented, and was highly commended for its scenic effect.

WARNING A THIEF

Conduct of the Marshal of Tren-ton, Gibson County, Ten-

Lost year a negro stole a watch from Mrs. Ellis, of this city, and, disposing of the property, left for parts unknown. A few weeks since Captain O'Haver, of the police, recovered the watch, and it was discovered that the negro was living with his father near Trenton, Gibson county, in this State. Chief-of-Police Davis wrote to City Marshal Blackmore at Trenton as to the robbery, and asking information as to the negro, but re-ceived no answer. Another Trenton official was in the city some days since, and to him Chief Davis expressed his surprise at City Marshal Blackmore's conduct in not answering his letter. The official, on returning home, asked Blackmore as to the letter. He replied that he had received it, but, as stating that the negro was still with his father. Captain O'Haver, armed with a State warrant, visited Trenton, and was seen by City Marshal Blackmore, but had no converation with him. This was late in the evening, and the next morning, when Captain O'Haver went out of town to the negro's house, the boy had disappeared, having got-ten wind of his arrival at Trenton. The boy's father, on being questioned concerning his son, said he knew what he came after, that Captain O'Haver wanted to arrest his son for stealing a watch in Memphis. This statement being contradicted by the captain, the old Idarky added that he knew he came to arrest his son, because a couple of weeks ago Marshal Blackmore, of Trenton, read to him the letter written by the chief-of-police at Memphis. Captain O'Haver at once suspected that the marshal had also given the negro warning the night before, so that he negro warning the night before, so that he could hide out and not be found by him. The conduct of the city marshal was at once reported to the mayor and several aldermen of the city, who promised to investigate the matter and remove the marshal if the facts stated were proven. It seems that Blackmore was elected marshal by the negro vote, beat-ing his opponents, who divided the white vote, and hence he must have felt under obligations to the negro thief and fugitive from justice to give him the information he ceived by letter from Chief Davis.
